

I learned to dance from a girl who could dance
Far better than I could even breathe.
I learned to fight from an old man who could fight,
Chase the dogs from the night with never havin' to swing.

And all that I wanted was all in my mind,
And all that I need is to sing.

I learned to crash from a friend who could crash,
Stop the world in it's tracks beneath his feet.
And I learned to be kind by trying hard to find it when
Fear I think comes most easily.

All that I wanted was all in my mind,
And all that I need is to sing.

I learned from a past when the flags were all half mast,
For the days when all our dreams were keen.
I would learn to fade like the sinking sun then they
May help me and give me days to waste.

All that I wanted was all in my mind,
And all that I need is to sing.

I learned to die from a good woman who died
With her head held high in the wind.
When my time arrives and the lights gonna leave my eyes,
It's the love that I find that's gonna ease the sting.

All that I wanted was all in my mind,
And all that I need...
